High security barrier seals are designed to provide a significant obstacle to the entry of containers and act directly on the middle bars of the container in order to prevent theft of goods.

Currently, in addition to this fundamental function, barrier seals must also ensure that no one can open a container and insert contaminated products or that illegal immigrants use it as a means of escape.

Barrier seals were created in the early 1990s when the system of tampering with the opening of a container was discovered, without touching the seal but by acting on the handle itself.

Barrier Seals act as a fork that clamp the middle bars of the container.

They are adjustable seals on a set of fixed positions through the various holes placed along the barrier.

A reliable barrier seal must be numbered with the same numbering on one or more of the following parts (depending on the different production models):

On the barrier

On the metal pin

On the bolt plastic covered part or pin

In addition, each barrier seal must be guaranteed by the manufacturer and by accredited international bodies with the corresponding ISO 17712:2013 certification. All barrier seals manufactured by LeghornGroup are certified as high security seals (in accordance with the international technical specification ISO 17712:2013).
